RAD Asks County Discuss United Fund

The Rural Area Development Committee has called a meeting of all citizens of Appomattox County for Tuesday, May 21, at 8 p.m. at the Court House in Appomattox. Purpose is to discuss the possibility of a United Fund for this county, said William Hunter of Farmer's National Bank, and a spokesman for the committee.

"RAD'S poll of civic clubs indicates that they are in favor of a United Campaign," Hunter said. "We would like to invite all of the county, especially the heads of civic organizations and heads of the various charity drives to come."

Reverend G. A. Harris, Jr., Baptist minister of Charlotte Court House, is planning to come to talk with the group. He is largely responsible for the successful Charlotte County United Fund, Hunter said.

FBLA Officers Installed

Perfect Attendance

Appomattox Elementary School

More than half of the boys and girls of Appomattox Elementary School did not miss a day of school last month. Chicken pox, measles, mumps, and hepatitis, all had their share in lowering the figures from March's total of 369, however. The April list below shows a drop of 169 for a total of 240. Total school enrollment is 521, including five children of pipeline workers who entered classes last week.

Health Director Speaks Today On Hepatitis Epidemic

Appomattox County's 1962-63 outbreak of infectious hepatitis will be the subject today, Thursday, of a major address by Dr. Francis J. Clements, county health director. He will speak to the Virginia Public Health Conference meeting at the Hotel Roanoke. Representatives from all state, city, and county health departments plus other health agencies will be on hand.

Clements' address is entitled, "Infectious Hepatitis Brings A New Look at Community Sanitation." He traces the outbreak of hepatitis to a section of Appomattox county right outside the town limits where the water supply is "definitely unprotected" a washing machine water "routed downhill on the surface of the ground" and the dugs go "from the bedroom by way of the waste water to other playgrounds."

A total of 36 cases is on record at the local health office dating from the present to August '62.

A series of colored slides are to be shown and narrated by county sanitarian Graham Pitzenberger. Clements said, "to give some idea how human waste goes from place to place by way of shoes, hands, and indirect contact to spread diseases such as infectious hepatitis, salmonella, polio, and the like."

"What is the answer?" Clements says that "we humans in Virginia have changed from the old rural, isolated farm life to urban and suburban living. We are doing this without planning. We love our liberties, so we move from the farm to get a job in town and we buy or rent a cheap house without safe water and sewage, and without trash and garbage collection . . . Friends meet friends . . . These groups wish to spend their hours without excessive expense so they find a place that is cheap where groceries, drinks, tobacco, and nick - nacks can be obtained . . . the manager is not trained in sanitation . . . the patrons make a mess and seem not to care. Next morning the crude restaurant gets a broom and a dish - rag. The customers get what they went for without hand washing . . ."

In another section of the address Clements states, "I was grateful last October when the State Health Service, after doing intensive work on what they term "The Master Plan" for Colonial Appomattox Court House. This "Master Plan", according to Superintendent Tom Norris' explanation, consists of accurate drawings and records of "what the Park has and what it plans to do with what it has."

Four Major Sections

Engineers, landscape artists, and architects were here the week of May 5-11 working on the four sections of the "Plan", actually a longer and more elaborate "Plan" to 36". General Package Narrative explains that the Interpretive Theme of the Park is the "Surrender of Lee's Army of Northern Virginia on April 9, 1865." This theme is expanded into several parts, with detail on such particulars as the position of the two armies and other data surrounding the event. The land and Drawings section includes the mapping of future trees and cultivated acres. The "Plan" recommends acquiring land easements to protect the highway leading to the park.

"For the first time," said Norris, "Drawings and narrative are tied in." He explained that each part relates to the other and gives continuity of thought and purpose to the preservation of the park. The Visitor and The Staff are the other sections. As improvements are made in the park, these will be noted in the "Master Plan," said Norris, providing personnel with up-to-date information.

Park Will Open Water System Bids May 23

The present pneumatic system for the water supply at Old Appomattox Court House National Park may be changed in the near future, Park Superintendent Tom Norris said on Monday. He said that the Park is supplied with water from a 24,000 gallon reservoir, and that certain improvements are necessary.

Bids on an air volume control, pressure relief, pressure gauge, water meter, and gate value with indicator post, will be opened in his office on May 23 at 2 p. m. Bid specifications call for a maximum of $2,000 for these improvements.

"Master Plan" Updates Records For Local Park

Local National Park Personnel, plus a team of experts from Eastern Design Office of the National Park Service, are doing intensive work on what they term "The Master Plan" for Old Appomattox Court House. This "Master Plan", according to Superintendent Tom Norris' explanation, consists of accurate drawings and records of "what the Park has and what it plans to do with what it has."

Appomattox Host To Hub Federation FFA Outing

The Appomattox FFA Chapter will be host to the annual Hub Federation FFA Outing to be held on the school grounds of the Appomattox High School, Saturday, May 18. The Outing will get under way with a softball tournament that will start at 1:30 p.m.

Teams representing chapters from Appomattox, Bedford, Amherst, and Campbell counties will participate in the annual affair that has created much interest in the Federation for a good number of years.

The climax to the afternoon of recreation will be the serving of barbecued hamburgers and hot dogs to the more than one hundred and fifty members and guests that are expected for this recreational and fellowship activity of the Hub Federation.

County Needs Signs, Say Local Tourists

The Lee - Grant Gift Shop on Route 24, just east of Appomattox, under the ownership of Mrs. Charles Crawley, has reopened for the spring and summer tourist season. Mrs. Crawley was asked by the TIMES to recall some of the tourists coming through. Here are her comments:

"We have had visitors from most of the states of the Union, and from Canada, England and, probably our greatest visitor, a gentleman from Australia . . . all have been interesting . . . some without number—ofhand are the young couple from California who run a gift shop on Catalina Island . . . they were making a great circle tour of the U. S. and stop,ing in all the gift shops they passed to get new ideas for their own shop . . .

Shop Class To Close

The farm mechanics repair classes at Appomattox High School closed at the end of the regular class period Tuesday night, May 14, and the class at the J. R. Ligon Elementary School will close Monday night, May 20, according to announcements made this week by H. B. Pack, instructor of vocational agriculture at Appomattox High School. The class at Appomattox had operated each Tuesday and Thursday night since November while the class at Pamplin operated each Monday night beginning in January.

Farmers and other interested individuals in these communities had enrolled in these classes in order to improve skills in repair, care, a d j u s t m e n t, and construction of farm equipment. Over one hundred farmers enrolled in the classes this year. Instruction was provided by R. R. Ashworth and H. A. Paulette at the Appomattox Shop and by R. B. Carter and Thomas Jamerson at Pamplin.

Mrs. Brightwell's 4-H Club met May 9, 1963. The son leaders lead us in singing "Mockingbird" and Gypsy in May". Then the meeting was turned over to Mr. Smith. Mr. Amos from V.P.I. came and checked our insects. These are the ones that got ribbons: Donna Smith and Ronny Shelton got blue ribbons; Shirley Tibbs and Bill Ramsey got red ribbons; Ralph Harnlett and Michael Jamerson, and Mike Moore got white ribbons. Then Mr. Amos showed us some slides on bees. Then the meeting was adjourned.

the gentleman from Detroit, who wrote asking me to send copies of a book that he had bought to several of his friends who had seen his and liked it . . .

the people who bought all the McLean House plates that I had on hand because some nighbors of theirs in California had ancestors who were born there. . .

the history professor from New York who stayed at least two hours studying the Civil War relics . . .

the man from Ninety Six, South Carolina — I had never heard the name of the town before' who has visited us four or five times . . .

Last September, Harriet French Turner, the Roanoke grandmother who was having a one man show of her paintings in Williamsburg during the month of September, stopped by on her way to the opening . . .

I have been particularly impressed with the number of young people, especially boys, who are seriously interested in the history of the Civil War — sometimes their knowledge has put me to shame . . . they are especially interested in th arms and ammunition used . . .

It's amazing how many different types of collectors there are— we have had collectors of guns, stamps, Civil War relics, coins and Confederate money, among others, to stop by our shop . . .

Yankee Saber

My husband's grandfathers easy saber is on display and that not only is it a Yankee saber, he has created a great deal of interest . . . experts have told me but was probably Grman made . . . He went into the Confereate army at the age of 16 — and we do not know whether this saber was picked up on the battlefield or was one that belonged to someone in the family prior to the war . . .

Too Hard to Find

Many people have told me that Appomattox Courthouse National Park is too hard to find . . . Gettysburg, Petersburg, Manassas, Vicksburg — all are well marked on main highways, but travelers on Routes 15, 29, 60 and even on 460 have difficulty in finding the proper turn -off that will take them to Appomattox and the scene of the surrender which ended the Civil War.

I have noticed that visitors from out of the state like to get something that is locally made or has some local significance or has the name "Appomattox" on it to take home as a souvenir of their visit . . ."

Jamerson Wins Fencing Bid

Colorful old wooden fences will return to the Old Appomattox Court House Area this coming Summer, Park Superintendent Tom Norris announced today.

J. E. Jamerson & Sons, of Appomattox has been awarded a contract for this work amounting to $29,997.28. The project is scheduled to begin late in May and will be completed about the end of August.

The Superintendent said that, before the enactment of fence laws in Virginia, our fathers used wooden fences in many forms to protect their homes and crops from wondering livestock. armies f o u n d these fences a ready source of dry wood for their campfires. George T. Peers AN Appomattox County resident of Civil War days, later complained, "There was not a single fence rail left except a few boards around the Court Green, so I was not put to any trouble of opening my gate". Every piece of loose wood that could be found had been used to make fires over in the Camps".

In all, some 8500 feet of fencing, in five different styles, make up this project. Included will be 1300 feet of chestnut rail or "worm" fences Norris said. Chestnut, long dead as a forest tree, is still found in mountainous area of Western Virginia and parts of West Virginia. Here, dead trees, standing like ghosts in the forest, are today cut and split into sound fence rails.
